

A Select Twelve

*Robert Arneson
Michael Cardew
Ruth Duckworth
Ken Ferguson
John Glick
Warren MacKenzie
Don Reitz
Daniel Rhodes
Paul Soldner
Toshiko Takaezu
Peter Voulkos
Marguerite Wildenhain*

*To a representative and random sampling of its American subscribers, Ceramics Monthly recently presented the following opinion poll: "Three world-famous potters of our time are now deceased—Shoji Hamada (1978), Bernard Leach (1979) and Maria Martinez (1980). For this and other reasons, the Editors of Ceramics Monthly would welcome your participation in a special survey: Who in your opinion are now the world's greatest living potters or ceramic artists?" In this portfolio are the twelve ceramists selected foremost by our readers.*

A Ceramics Monthly Portfolio

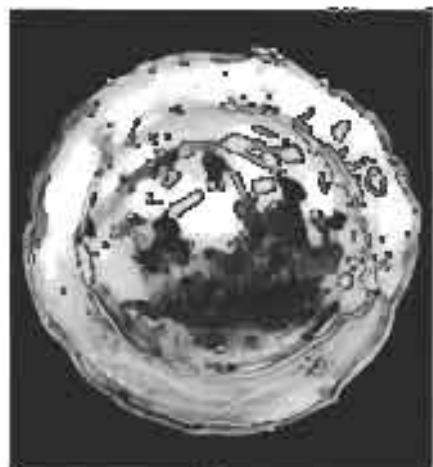

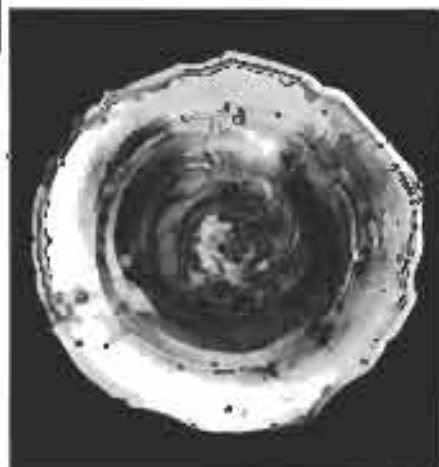

John Glick

Farmington, Michigan

Tray: Detroit, 1988

Center Yum plate, Flinn Yum Pottery

Allanard Wayne State University, Detroit, B.F.A., 1983; Cambridge Academy of Art, Macombfield Hills, Michigan, M.F.A., 1981. Established Flinn Yum Pottery, 1984.

The Tray, 26 inches in width, rib bottom with radial walls, glazed stoneware, 1988.

Center Yum plate, each 17 inches in diameter, glazed porcelain with feldspar copper slip, surface rib marked when wet, 1989.

Right: John Glick blowing beads in his studio.
"There is such vast freedom beyond what one could say are functional parameters for interiorities. Certainly this is the conflict of practical and personal that is the real challenge. It is endless and it's why I believe the functional word is an oxymoron to interiorities as my sculptural form would be.
Both are equally challenging and the challenge is the reason we work."

Opposite page: Center serving tray and open jug, each 18 inches in length, glazed stoneware, constructed of radial parts, 1987.

